

DNR: Could you please state your name.

Arthur: Colber and Arlene

DNR: Why did you join the CCC?

Arthur: Well, I wanted to try to get a job, but I couldn't find one. I wanted to get the experience, but you can't get the experience if you never work. The CCC was it. I had a friend join at the same time; there was quite a few of us.

DNR: You said you entered with a lot of friends. Did you get stationed together?

Arthur: Same place.

DNR: Well that's nice.

Arthur: My first job was in the rock quarry.

DNR: Was this at backbone then?

Arthur: Yes, backbone

Arthur: I got to work on the bridge and on the boathouse, then I got to be assistant leader and got the job of tearing out the old lumber damn.

DNR: Is that where the present damn is now? Did there used to be a different damn before?

Arthur: Yes, they had to build one to run the water around.

Arthur: I got paid four to five dollars a month. The assistant leader got paid more, but I forgot.

DNR: What did you like most about the time with the CCC?

Arthur: Alot, you got to learn a lot of different jobs, which I wouldn't have known. We had an old steam engine piledriver. It was quite of bit of work building those. If we had a chain saw it would have been a lot quicker.

DNR: Is their anything you would like to add about your experience that I didn't ask?

Arthur: No, I guess not.

DNR: (To Arlene) Where did you meet your husband at?

Arlene: We lived about two miles apart.
